

Joshua was born a slave in Goshen in the land of Egypt and grew up under cruel Egyptian taskmasters, but rose to be the leader of Israel through faithful obedience to God.

He wasn't afraid to go against the crowd and popular thinking; instead, he intentionally and knowingly stood up for what he believed was right even though all of his peers, except one, namely Caleb, out-numbered him and voted against his views and observations. He was not deterred even when threatened with death.

Joshua was a mighty man of God, handpicked by God to be Moses' successor to lead the children of Israel not only militarily, but also spiritually.

What other man would have the courage and faith to order the sun and the moon to stand still?
